Jesus the Great Evangelist

When Jesus was here on earth, He was the greatest evangelist. His mission was to seek and save the lost (Luke 19:10). He was able to use different situations to help people come to the knowledge of the truth of God's word.

How did Jesus approach people and what methods did He use in approaching people?

1. There was the "stand out" factor. When Jesus finished the "Sermon on the Mount" it is said of Jesus, "For he taught them as one having authority, and not as the scribes" (Matt. 7:29). The way in which he taught was different than the others and it made Jesus stand out. In the midst of a wicked world, Christians should stand out and cause people to take notice. When they take notice, it is an opportunity that God has opened to offer to tell them about Him and His word.

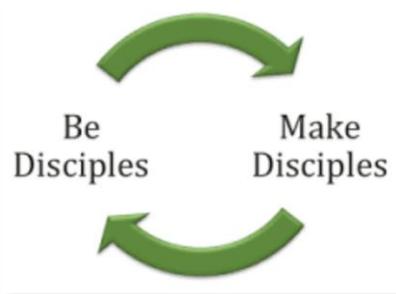

2. Jesus helped others for the sake of teaching them. When Jesus practiced good works it was for the purpose of showing the power of God to others. Many times before or after helping people, Jesus would teach them. Our benevolent work should be used as opportunities to evangelize and help the souls of others.

3. Jesus was friendly for the sake of teaching others. Jesus traveled through Samaria and encountered a woman who was drawing water from a well. Jesus befriended this woman and used the opportunity to discuss spiritual matters as everlasting water, His Messiahship, and true worship. All of this teaching came about because Jesus befriended a stranger. Not only did this woman believe on Jesus, but she went back to her village and told others she had found the Messiah.

4. Jesus performed miracles so that others would believe. The miracles of Jesus were not for self-glorification, but to exhibit the power of God and lead others to belief. Today, our good works should not be for self-glorification, but to exhibit God's power and to allow Him to work through us.

Why not follow after the steps of Jesus and become a great soul-winner like Him?
